EDUCATION OF GIRLS.—Female education, to be appropriate, must be adapted not only to the distinctive nature of the sex, but to the particular organization of the individual. This bears upon an evil which of necessity is inherent in every large seminary, and which at best can be only partially obviated. Carlyle in his life of Schiller, referring to his six years in a Stuttgart school, says: "The system of education seems to have been formed on the principles not of cherishing and correcting nature, but of rooting it out and supplying its place with something better. The process of teaching and living was conducted with the stiff formality of military drilling. Everything went on by statute and ordinance, there was no scope for the exercise of free will, no allowance for the varieties of original structure. A scholar might possess what instinct or capacity he pleased, the 'regulations of the school' took no account of this. He must fit himself into the common mould, which, like the old giant's bed, stood there, appointed by superior authority to be filled alike by the great and little. * * The pupils were kept apart from the conversation or sight of any person but their teachers. None ever got beyond the precincts of despotism to snatch even a fearful joy. Their very amusements proceeded by word of command. What is so forcibly said here of the Stuttgart school must appertain more or less to every large school, because in every large establishment of whatsoever kind, strict method and rigid system are necessary to order. If you subject two plastic natures to exactly the same process, one at least must suffer, because no two natures are exactly alike. If you do this upon two hundred, so much wider the mischief. This treatment must especially injure the feminine organization, because it is the most delicate and sensitive. God, with his infinite resources, always creates with variety. He has made no two grains of sand alike, much less two human beings. He has varied the elements of humanity in almost infinite combinations."

It is the sacred office of education to develop a symmetrical healthful fullness of being after the particular type that God has indicated for each individual. A true training should no more destroy variety among women, than a true cultivation destroys variety among flowers. There is as much diversity among the flowers as among the weeds; and so there ought to be as much diversity among the good as among the bad. It is true that there are certain qualities that are indispensable to every good character, as petals are to flowers. But it is not the mere presence or the mere number of the petals that gives the charm to the flower. It is the native coloring and the native fragrance. As these differ not only in degree but in kind, so character differs in all its finer essences and issues. Education must heed this. It must work with nature. If it will deal genially by her, and not thrust her aside or crush her down, she will lend all her best influence to its work, and manifest herself more distinctly and graciously in the result. If it be truly wise and benign and patient, she will indeed let it turn and train even the evil roots she has fixed in the very core of the being, so that they shall grow up not into briers, but into roses. Collective, or, to use a more expressive epithet, wholesale education, the only kind boarding schools can furnish, excludes almost entirely this individual training; and to that one cause is greatly owing the painful lack of spontaneity and the artificial uniformity that mark all the higher circles of American society. This effect must continue until the large boarding school system gives way to private schools, or to the employment of thoroughly qualified family governesses, or, far better yet, to the teaching and training of daughters, Cornelia fashion by Cornelia mothers. There was a world of practical wisdom in that injunction of Napoleon to Madam Campan: "Be it your care to train up mothers who shall know how to educate their children." Had it been generally followed, France would have been saved.—J. R. Spaulding, in Hours of Home.

HYMEN'S CARNIVAL.—From April 10, 1864, when the new marriage regulations were first promulgated to the freed people by the Secretary of War, there had been recorded at Vicksburg, fourteen hundred and fifty-six marriages, before the 1st of November. The record is required to show the color or blood of the parties united in marriage, and of the parents of each; of course, the color of six persons should be recorded for each marriage. Out of these fourteen hundred and fifty six marriages there were one hundred and sixty-six persons who were the children of one white parent, and three of them were children of white mothers. One-third of all the marriages recorded so far are of parties white or partly white on one side or the other. The general fact seems to be that the lighter colored mulattoes are rather proud of their relationship, while the darker ones are rather unwilling to own it, or are ignorant of it. A large part of the marriages recorded were of those who had lived together as husband and wife—perhaps for many years. One old man, at Memphis, was married, with several others, one morning. No sooner was the ceremony completed, than he turned and tenderly embraced and kissed his new legal wife, with evident thanksgiving that she was now, in the eyes of the law and of civilization, as she had long been in the eye of God, his own recognized wife. One old man, of almost three-score and ten, was then joined in lawful marriage to his venerable wife. At the conclusion of the ceremony, when the chaplain extended his hand with the nuptial benediction, and dismissed them, as was the custom, in a short prayer, they both dropped on their knees together, their eyes streaming with tears of thankfulness, and at the close, still kneeling, the old man reached out both arms and hugged her to his heart, saying: "My dear old woman, I bless God that I can now, for the first time, kiss my own lawful wife." There seems to be tides in this matrimonial sea. One chaplain married one hundred and two couples in one day, which shows to what perfection art may attain with sufficient practice. He would be "well to-do" in the world, if northern notions of marriage fees prevailed. Unhappily for chaplains they do not. One received a silver dime for marrying a couple. Several times the persons have been presented with a dime postal currency, and half a dime has been given as a marriage fee. The oldest person married was eighty-eight years old. He brought to the altar an elderly young woman of fifty—thirty-eight years younger than himself. One man of eighty married a woman of forty. The greatest disparity of ages was forty-six years. A mature gentleman of sixty-six united to himself a girl of twenty. She made sure of getting a man old enough to be respected. Three white men married colored women. One old slave-trader married a handsome quadroon whom he had bought for $3,000, and had been offered $5,000 for.

WONDERS OF NATURE.—It is a wonderful thing to look abroad over the face of nature, and see how every mineral, vegetable and animal production is constituted, so as to minister in some way to the wants of man—to see the vegetable world silently engaged in extracting mineral matter from the soil, and storing them up for man; and man, impelled by instinct, selecting these as his own proper food—to behold not only his food and drink flowing constantly to him through the ever revolving cycle of three kingdoms, but even his most valuable ornaments presented through the same natural channel! It is more than wonderful, it is sublime to view atom after atom of the whole creation unceasingly changing place, that man, the lord of creation, may be abundantly supplied with all his comforts and luxuries; to see the lilies of the field, and the insects of the earth and air, living and dying for man, yielding up their lives for man's sustenance and adornment. True, "the lilies of the field take no thought for the morrow," but the unseen finger that opens their petals to the day points them out as the appropriate food to some of those animals whose life or death ministers to man! The blooming cactus not only charms the eye of man, and makes the arid desert bloom as the rose, but it furnishes food for an insect that lives upon it, and grows and dies to clothe man with the same resplendent dye.

A BOWIE KNIFE DUEL.—A fatal duel is reported to have occurred a few days ago between Charles Anderson and a man by the name of Lewis, on Sinker creek, about ten miles below the Ainsworth Mill, in Owyhee county. A dispute occurred in regard to some hay, when they commenced a fight with knives, which ended in the death of both parties. One died immediately, and the other lived but a short time.—Boise Statesman.

The Call figures from the Assessor's reports that San Francisco lacks only some two millions of dollars of being one-half of the property in the State. It pays into the State Treasury about half the money received by that institution from ordinary sources of revenue.

SUFFRAGE IN THE DISTRICT.—"Occasional" writes thus to the Philadelphia Press:

When the right of suffrage is fairly exercised by the colored men of the District of Columbia, included in the classes enumerated by the President in his letter to George Stearns, every apprehension now indulged will subside, precisely as the prophecies of demoralization and turbulence, as results of emancipation policy failed when tested by infallible experience. We must not forget that a number of leading statesmen in the South, like James L. Orr, of South Carolina; Reagan, of Texas (the rebel Postmaster General); Henry S. Foote, of Mississippi, and Alexander H. Stephens, of Georgia, have frankly discussed the necessity and the expediency, not simply of elevating and enlightening the colored men, but of enfranchising them by ultimately clothing them with political rights. These men reasoned—not with deference to a community like Washington, where the resident colored population are confessedly the most intelligent and exemplary of their race (having been trained by long years of association with the whites and latterly stimulated by necessary exertions for the very struggle now upon us)—but in view of the necessities of providing by law such regulations as would fit the suddenly-manumitted millions of the South for their new destinies. That the anti-slavery men in Congress will pause before the clamor of the local politicians, who for four years have enjoyed the generous protection of the national authority, is best disproved by recollecting how coolly the objections and denunciations of the same politicians were disregarded on more than one occasion, when in this same capital it was necessary to resort to decided measures for the protection of the public property, and the vigorous prosecution of the war. The work will be done—not in any violent or indiscriminate way—not by admitting to suffrage the refugees or contrabands who flocked here for safety and for succor—but by recognizing those titles to the confidence of the Government, which will add to our voting population citizens who will so understand and respect their rights, that they never will be found disgracing this confidence by throwing their ballots with the party who, during the most dreadful years in American history, had no stronger sympathy than that which responded to the sentiments and the savagery of the authors of the rebellion.

Some of the miseries of New York tenement houses are seen in the report of some newspaper men who visited several of the thick settled parts of the city with a city missionary. One report says:

It is difficult to find language with which to portray the shocking, indecent and murderous places in which a large proportion of our population is doomed to live. Within a stone's throw of the office of the Journal of Civilization, is a building containing over 5,000 families, or over 1,200 persons, occupying rooms not larger than an ordinary closet, where there is neither provision for light, air or water, no hope in case of fire, and where the sun never peers a solitary ray.

ARMS SEIZED ON THE CANADIAN FRONTIER.—The Hamilton (Canada) Times says that recently, when the American train crossed the suspension bridge, the customs officer and a conductor on the Great Western Railway made the discovery of a large invoice of revolvers and metallic cartridges, the latter article being packed in carpet-bags. It is intimated that several seizures of the same character had previously occurred within a few days, the facts regarding which, for some reason, have been withheld from the public; but in the present instance the seizure was witnessed by a gentleman of Hamilton, whose statements are worthy of perfect reliance. The parties in whose possession the arms and ammunition were found were of suspicious appearance, and it was believed that the consignment was destined for Woodstock and London.

GEN. SHERIDAN'S COMING.—Maj. Gen. Phil Sheridan writes to an Oregon friend that he intends to visit this State before long. He has many warm friends in this State, and the welcome which will greet him upon his arrival will mingle high regard for the man with profound appreciation of the value of his public services.—Statesman.

Chairman Union State Central Committee

Salem, Oregon, Jan 31st, 1866.

Senator Nesmith's Record

Notwithstanding Senator Nesmith's record, and in spite of the fact that the Senator himself does not claim to be a member of the Union party, the Statesman insists that he is such That journal asserts that he 'can do the Union party in Oregon some good, and that he will be apt to do it' We should be extremely glad to have him fulfill the promise the Statesman makes in his behalf, but we must take leave to say that if he does hereafter accomplish the good for the Union party which his organ boasts of, it will be a great deal more than he has ever done before. In speaking of our course in regard to the Senator, the Statesman says we are trying to hunt down and drive off a man who is a member of the Union party. A rare member of the Union party, truly! We append some of the Senator's words, which show how good a Unionist he is—hoping they will be carefully conned by the editor of the Statesman:

The emancipation proclamation never had my approval, as a measure warranted by any constitutional authority or based upon sound policy. * * * I have no love for slavery, and would be glad to see it abolished everywhere; but I am unable to find any authority in the Constitution for the Executive or for Congress, or for both combined, to perform the act.

I should prefer to see Gen. McClellan elected simply for the reason that it would remove the obstacles now in the way of bringing about terms of accommodation with the South.

We might quote more at large from the Senator's frequently [illegible] opinions, but we think the above will be sufficient to show every person except the editor of the Statesman that Mr. Nesmith's Unionism is not of that approved quality which inspired our noble patriots to stand firm in the day of battle, and which filled them with resolution not to yield a jot to the demands of those who, with parricidal ingratitude, were traitorously fighting against the country to subvert and destroy it. Men of unflinching fidelity—quite unlike Senator Nesmith—wanted no "terms of accommodation with the South." Absolute submission on the part of the rebels was the terms they proposed, and the terms they were resolved to obtain. They did not desire, as Senator Nesmith did, to elect a man to the Presidency who would be acceptable to the rebels. They wanted some better recommendation for the man who was to wield the [illegible] of this Republic for a term of four years, than that he should be willing to treat with and yield to the rebellious South. According to his own words, Senator Nesmith wanted McClellan to be President because the defeat of Mr. Lincoln would be a concession to the rebels. The Union party stood by ABRAHAM LINCOLN because they knew that on his re election depended the salvation of the country. The rebels wanted McClellan elected. For this reason Union men did not want him. Senator Nesmith wanted McClellan elected. For this reason the Union men of Oregon do not want him (Nesmith) to hold a place in the United States Senate for another term of six years.

Mr. Nesmith has lately written a letter warmly [illegible] President Johnson. Now, in view of the fact that he opposed Mr. Johnson's election, we can fairly estimate what his support of the President is worth. The choice lay between Geo. H. Pendleton and Andrew Johnson. Senator Nesmith did not hesitate to support Pendleton, although he (Pendleton) had said in Congress:

"What force of arms can compel a State to refrain from doing that which her State Government, supported by the sentiment of her people, is determined to persist in doing? Sir, the whole theory of coercion is impracticable. It is contrary to the genius and spirit of the Constitution. My voice to-day is for conciliation; my voice is for compromise. I beg you, gentlemen, to hear that voice. If you will not, if you find conciliation impossible, if your differences are so great that you cannot or will not compromise them, then, gentlemen, let the seceding States depart in peace; let them establish their Government and empire, and work out their destiny according to the wisdom which God has given them."

Into what an abyss would the country have fallen had Senator Nesmith's candidates been elected! Who, without a shudder, can contemplate how awful would have been the condition of this country, had George H. Pendleton, by probable chance, succeeded to the great office now held by Andrew Johnson!

If there are any who would inquire why we thus revert to the past political record of Senator Nesmith, we answer that our only motive in so doing is to prevent his re election. We would willingly let his former political sins pass without further notice, were the fact not patent to every one that he is again a candidate for the high station he now fills. This his organ may deny; but the denial will avail nothing against the positive knowledge which every person of observation must have acquired, that his friends are industriously working in his behalf. Again, witness the Senator's recent conduct. He writes letters to this State, on the one hand violently assailing the ultra "Democracy;" on the other, praising so highly the President's "conservatism," that it is easy to see he is far more "conservative" than the President himself. Beyond question, he desires to recommend himself to the favor of the "new conservative party," which the Statesman chalked out not long ago. If such be not his aim, why should he be so anxious just now to define his political views? His object is nothing else but to atone as far as possible for his past political misconduct; to cause some modification of public opinion in regard to himself; to hide his former self under the cloak of professed zeal for the President he wanted to defeat, and to ingratiate himself again with that portion of his constituents who were justly indignant at his defection.

We repeat, in the language of a former article, that "if the friends of Senator Nesmith desire his re-election, they will have to try some more cunning plan than the obtainment from him of a declaration in favor of the Administration." Whether his support of the present Administration is real or simulated, may be judged of by his own words. He desired the election of McClellan for this reason among others, viz that McClellan "would surround himself with honest men" Now President Johnson is surrounded with the very same Cabinet which Mr Lincoln appointed. Have these distinguished men suddenly become "honest" enough to be the objects of our Senator's admiration? Or is this passionate admiration a thing assumed for the nonce, in order that our Senator may be returned to his seat through the popularity he hopes to acquire by reason of his laudations of those whom a grateful nation will always honor?

We shall dismiss our remarks on this subject whenever the partisans of Senator Nesmith cease their efforts to make the Union party the means and instrument through which to obtain his re-election. We have not the slightest feeling of animosity toward him He has a perfect right to his own opinions on public affairs. Perhaps he claims the right, in his present exalted position, to shift about like a weather-vane at the top of the edifice; but the people do not so interpret his duties When he ceases to be an aspirant for political honors—when he no longer solicits a place of public trust—then we shall have done with him But so long as we know that he is a candidate for re election and that his friends are busy in their efforts to thwart the will of the people by foisting him upon them we shall not halt in our purpose to show his past instability and unfaithfulness, and his consequent unfitness for the place he seeks to hold for another long term The Union party will select Union men for office, not those who supported the man who desired "to let the seceding States depart in peace"

LEE'S SURRENDER PREMEDITATED —The following passage is from the forthcoming volume of Pollard's Southern history of "The Fourth Year of the War"

There can be no doubt in history that General Lee, in taking his army away from Richmond and Petersburg had decided in his own mind upon the hopelessness of the war and had predetermined its surrender The most striking proof of this is, that on his retreat there was no order published against straggling—a thing unprecedented in all deliberate and strategic retreats—and nothing whatever done to maintain discipline The men were not animated by the style of general orders usual on such occasions They straggled and deserted almost at will An idea ran through the Virginia troops that with the abandonment of Richmond the war was hopeless, and that they would be justified in refusing to fight outside the limits of their State Nothing was done to check the notorious circulation of this notion in the army The Virginia troops scattered off to their homes at almost every mile of the route We have seen that Pickett was only left with a handful of men Some of the brigade commanders had not hesitated to advise their men that the war was virtually over, and that they had better go home and "make crops"

But there are other proofs, besides the omission of the measures against straggling usual on retreats, that General Lee had previsaged a surrender of his army. He carried off from Petersburg and Richmond all the transportation of his army, sufficient, perhaps, for one hundred thousand men, certainly largely in excess of the actual needs of the retreat. The excessive number of Virginia troops who were permitted to drop out of the ranks and return to their homes shows very well that there was no firm purpose to carry the war out of the limits of the State. Prisoners taken on the retreat invariably reported that the army was soon to be halted for a surrender, and General Custis Lee, when captured by the enemy, is alleged to have made the same revelation of his father's designs.

QUARTZ ABOUT HELENA.—The Montana Post publishes a letter from Helena, of which the subjoined is an extract

"Quartz on the brain" has reached a crisis I have to reveal the discovery of the greatest lode yet discovered in the Territory. It was first discovered on "Nelson" gulch, by Messrs Worden & Hall, who named it the "Oliff" lode It has more the appearance of a mountain of quartz than a lode There have been three extensions made west to "Colorado" gulch, while toward the east there have been no less than eighteen distinct discoveries made Nine of these discoveries are owned and consolidated in one company, called the "Crœsus Mining Company." Two others are owned by the "Silver Mountain Mining Company" The western extensions are owned by Somerville & Co. The crevice of this lode is from twenty to two hundred feet wide It rises, in many places, thirty feet above the surrounding surface, and can be easily traced for many miles at a single "coup d'œil" It forms the grand dividing line between the slate and the granite formations, and crosses all the gulches in this vicinity, none of which pay above where it crosses, and all pay well below. The lodes discovered on the south side seem all verging towards it, while itself descends almost perpendicularly. There have been, already, six assays made of rock from it, ranging from $28 to $197 per ton. But such is the enormous amount of quartz exposed, that it has been estimated that a sixty stamp mill, running night and day for two years, could not exhaust what quartz there is in sight on some single claims. The subject is certainly bewildering. It is in the hands of experienced quartz men, who are not easily excited, but who will understand its value. None wish to sell at any price. One mill will be at work on it within a month, another is on its way hither.

The Mountaineer of the 8th publishes the following

By private advices from Washington we learn that Col. Nesmith has succeeded in inducing the Second Assistant Postmaster General to advertise for mail service between the Dalles and Canyon City. Offers have also gone forward to temporarily tender the service for the minimum paid per mile on any mail route in Oregon. We congratulate our Canyon City friends on the probability of having mail communication at an early day

Along the canyon of John Day River, and from the Des Chutes to the south east, the winter appears to have ended. At Alkali Flat, half way from here to Canyon City, preparations are being made for sowing grain, and much ground is already plowed. At Canyon City the snow has entirely disappeared, and the weather is warm and spring-like. But for the loss of bridges, and the muddy and cut-up condition of the roads, there is nothing now to prevent the resumption of the usual spring traffic with the John Day mines

It is now so far advanced towards spring that we may reasonably hope that our communications with the lower Columbia will not be again cut off, or at most for two or three days. The railroad at the Cascades is open for traffic, and between here and Celilo the road is in repair It is now only necessary that the ice above Des Chutes should break up, and the business campaign of 1866 will be fairly inaugurated The melting mood which nature at present wears will soon break the barrier with which winter has bound up the river, so that it is full time for those who have anything to do to be getting ready for an early start

A VERY ATTENTIVE READER —The Walla Walla Statesman comments on the President's Message. To show how attentively the editor of the Statesman has read and considered that very excellent document, we quote as follows from his remarks

The vapid declamations of the radicals about wiping out State lines is severely rebuked, and these dabsters in politics are shown that the Constitution is the offspring of the States, without which the Government must cease to exist

In contrast with the above, we quote from the Message:

"To form a more perfect Union," by an ordinance of the people of the United States, is the declared purpose of the Constitution.

"Dabsters" is very good, seeing that its true signification is precisely opposite to that given it by the Statesman. "The Constitution is the offspring of the States" is better, seeing that the very first paragraph of the Message asserts the opposite doctrine Shan't we hear something more about "dabsters" from that "good Union journal," the Walla Walla Statesman?

THE SPIRIT OF THE SOUTH —We are permitted to copy the following from a letter written by Rev. Mr Pearne to a gentleman of this city. The letter is dated, "Knoxville, Dec 8th" Mr Pearne is in a region which has suffered by the war, and which has been "reconstructed" on the plan of pardoning everybody and even rewarding the rebels for their treason What the result of all this is, let the language of one who is perfectly conversant with affairs in the South describe

You will recollect what I said in my lecture in the Presbyterian Church at Portland, as to my fears that the South would practically establish serfdom It is coming to pass as I feared In Louisiana, Mississippi, South Carolina and Alabama, it is virtually as bad as ever for the colored race President Johnson has carried amnesty too far, and his magnanimity has been but "casting pearls before swine", they turn again to rend us Brownlow says, "the war closed two years too soon, the rebels are whipped but not badly enough" They are again organizing to overthrow the Government

Four well known printers died at New Orleans lately within a few hours Their names were Anseline Fortier, a French Canadian foreman of the English part of the Bee D D O Brien a native of Tipperary and connected for many years with Mr Pendergrast in publishing the Delta; Robert P Steirs of Ohio formerly known as "Old Bob" (he was both printer and sailor and served in Farragut's fleet which took New Orleans) and Newton C Blackburne A notice of their deaths in the Crescent (Simon Boliver Buckner's paper) closes with the following neat bit of pathos Your earthly "forms" are at last "locked up" in death's embrace and "gone to press," and here is the hope that when your "proof sheets" shall come up for "revision" at the final day the Great Proof Reader of the Universe will find no "marks" to make

The Montana Post of December 30th says tobacco is five dollars per pound in that market

From the Upper Country

We obtain the subjoined from the Walla Walla Statesman of Jan 26th

After two long months of dreary and spiritless weather in which the sun was obscured for weeks at a time we are again in the enjoyment of clear cloudless days with the temperature at about 50° To say that the change is a relief but feebly expresses the universal joy with which the relaxation of winter's icy grasp is hailed Under the influence of sunshine days people feel better act better, and to all intents and purposes are better With the change in the weather business has improved and trade generally is more healthy With the opening of spring our merchants calculate not without reason upon a heavy trade Our proximity to the mining districts and the fact that flour and bacon—the two great staples of Walla Walla Valley—can be sold in this market at lower figures than the same articles can be laid down for from below ensures us in a measure a monopoly of the mining trade Time an important element, is also in our favor, and when bare markets are to be supplied with the necessaries of life this consideration is not to be overlooked Looking at all these advantages it is not strange that we have grown restive under the restraints of an Arctic winter, and that the first dawnings of spring are hailed with jubilant joy

On Wednesday morning the water of Mill Creek had risen so high, from the effects of the thaw that fears were entertained that the bridge would be swept away and the town flooded The bulk head a few yards above the bridge, was undermined and forced from the bank, and the water wheel of the planing mill of Dovell & Masson was rendered almost useless by the partial destruction of its foundation The building was also moved from its position Chicken coops, lumber timber, etc , were to be seen on Wednesday and Thursday sailing down the rapid current, much to the delight of careless boys, and gratification of the red skins who had a very good thing in catching and appropriating the drifting articles On Thursday night, however, the water began to recede rapidly, and no further danger is now apprehended

Considerable comment is at this time on the tapis among the farmers of the valley—at least among that class of them who have not yet obtained from the Land Office of this Territory the proper titles to their quarter sections of land upon which they have settled and made improvements All this discussion among our rural friends appears to arise from the fact that over two years have now elapsed since the surveys in the valleys were made by Mr Majors, and it seems that the result of this work has not been received as yet by the Office at Vancouver. This Mr Majors arrived here from Washington City in the fall of '63, authorized to establish the boundary line between Oregon and Washington Territory At the same time he was instructed by the Surveyor General at Olympia to survey and locate the claims taken up in this valley Finishing his field labors, the engineer left for Washington City in the spring of '64 One report is, that all his notes, etc , have been lost; another version is, that he is striving to get Congress to reimburse him (in the manner he thinks it ought) before he will transmit to the proper office the plats of his surveys. Many of our agriculturalists believe that a new survey will be ordered but of this we are unable to speak advisedly at this time. One thing is certain, however, as the matter now stands, it has occasioned no little confusion and dissatisfaction among the farming population, who are desirous of "proving up," according to law, upon their lands as preemption and homestead claims

Parties lately down from the Basin, inform us that there has been terrible suffering on the line of road to South Boise At Cammas Prairie, our informant states that he found fifteen men in one house, all more or less frozen, and many of them so badly that amputation will be necessary to save life.

Michael H Lewis, the murderer of David Peevie, which murder was committed on Quartz Gulch, in Olive Creek precinct, Grant county, Oregon, was arrested on Saturday last The particulars, as related to us by a gentleman from that section of the country, are as follows Peevie and his murderer were mining partners, and were making money rapidly, but disagreed about some minor matter connected with their work, which created a coolness between them, and Lewis discontinued his labor, whereupon Peevie requested him to either furnish a hand or continue his labor, else he, Peevie, would turn him out of the claim, (having previously given Lewis one half of it) Lewis, immediately upon the demand being made by Peevie, declared that "he would kill him the next day," which was executed, as declared, on the 23d day of last October. After killing his partner, Lewis carried the corpse into the tunnel on the claim and there buried it, then obliterating all traces of the dead by scraping and covering the blood of his victim, and shaving the same off the wheeling plank and burying it beneath it, he walked off through the mountain tops The miners in the district turned out en masse, but no trace of Lewis could be discovered, and the pursuit was abandoned by all but the Sheriff of the county, who, after becoming satisfied that he did not go out of the State on the eastern border, turned his attention in this direction, and accompanied by Deputy Sheriff Bonham, arrived in our city some two weeks since After making themselves known to A. Seitel, Esq , Sheriff of Walla Walla county, who furnished them the means for ready knowledge, they proceeded to search for their man among the thousands of strangers sojourning in our valley and the adjacent county On Saturday morning last, Lewis' whereabouts was discovered to be on the South Fork of the Walla Walla river, some 15 miles from here, in Umatilla county, Oregon, and before night he was under arrest, taken before the nearest magistrate in Oregon, and by him ordered to be conveyed to Canyon City for trial At this time (Jan 22) he is securely guarded in our county jail

After diligent inquiry, we are satisfied that our stock owners have suffered but slight loss from the late severe weather Resident owners had provided abundance of feed and consequently have escaped loss A number of bands that were driven into the valley late last fall, and were then in fine condition, have suffered severely, but this is no more than was to be expected The practice of driving cattle into this valley and leaving the animals to shift for themselves, however well it may have answered heretofore, has proved a failure this season and is not likely to be again repeated Several bands thus wintered in the neighborhood of the old Hudson Bay Farm have suffered severely, but beyond these the loss has been trifling In other sections of country where feed is less abundant, the fatality has been very great, many owners having lost every hoof they owned The prospect is that with the coming season prices for cattle will rule high.

The leading business men of Boise Basin have have determined in future to receive gold dust in the way of trade at $14 per ounce If the holder of the dust thinks it worth more than this figure, he can exchange it for coin The object of the movement appears to be to get rid of dust as a circulating medium

BLACKFOOT ITEMS —Considerable excitement has been caused by the unaccountable disappearance of Mrs Reed, the wife of the landlord of the Half Way House," between this place and Jefferson Gulch On the 9th inst the missing woman had been engaged in washing, and her work was left uncompleted Some nuggets that she had saved and her clothes were all left safe and untouched As her husband had made no effort to find her, and his previous conduct had been anything but considerate and kind toward her, suspicion was attached so strongly to him that he was arrested by the citizens This was the last news

On the 10th inst "Dutch Hans" left Boswell & Sleeper's ranch for this town The severity of the storm compelled him to succumb, and he was not found until the following Wednesday If his life be saved, it is probable that amputation of his feet and hands will be necessary

On last Monday week, a man named Hart was accidentally shot by John Pine There were, we are informed a large number of men about Lynch & Malley's store at the time and the unhappy man who thus carelessly took the life of a fellow creature, was showing his friends how quickly he could draw his revolver To prevent accident they stepped behind him, but in pulling the pistol, previous to presenting he turned the muzzle backwards over his shoulder and accidentally pulling the trigger, shot Hart through the temple The man who fired the fatal shot is best known as Andy O Connell's bar keeper '—Montana Post, 30th December

A DONATION —Recently Gen Spinner United States Treasurer received a contribution from a beggar amounting to one cent which he tendered as his contribution toward canceling the national debt The donation has been accepted and transferred to the vaults of the Treasury passing through the same channels and forms that a more munificent sum would The action of this mendicant is in commendable contrast to the example set by many wealthy individuals whose contributions for this object, in the bulk, do not loom up in high proportions —Washington Chronicle

FROZEN BETWEEN TWO WIVES!—The other night, says the Salt Lake Vedette, a poor victim of "plurality" was frozen to death while hauling wood between the respective cabins of his first and second wives down somewhere in Cottonwood Canyon

THE DANIELS HALL'S PULMONARY BALSAM is sold for fifty cents only It is the quickest and most efficacious remedy extant for coughs, colds asthma, and all pulmonary [illegible]

OUR INDUSTRIAL [illegible].—Portland is not altogether dependent upon the resources of her mercantile [illegible] existence [illegible] we cannot boast [illegible] water privileges upon which to [illegible] erect buildings for manufacturing and mechanical purposes, we are [illegible] establishments already [illegible] which, with the aid of steam power, give employment to hundreds in every way of [illegible], and warrant a business more permanent and profitable to the city than all the rest. It is the manufacturing, combined with the commercial and mercantile interests, that gives to a community its stability. No section can be really prosperous without a proper degree of attention is directed to its home manufactures. Shipping and re-shipping and the handling of cargoes from we care not how many vessels, with the articles in the crude state, or made up before imported, cannot insure support for a crowded population. We desire to see Portland become a grand metropolis, and from all outward appearances it must be admitted that the advances for the past five years are tending strongly to the end that it may; but people must not trust too confidently upon the resources of the adjacent territories for the desired object. There is no reason why ten thousand varieties of articles should not be manufactured at home, instead of being imported from abroad, and thus add to the wealth of the State and the wealth of those whose enterprise add so much to the general prosperity. With the hope of introducing to the public the advantages that may be gained from an acquaintance with the manufacturing interests of Portland, we have from time to time made allusion to the various branches of [illegible] industrial pursuits. Yesterday we visited the establishment of Messrs Carson & Porter, manufacturers of sash, blinds, doors, molding, cracker and fruit boxes, etc., which covers considerable space on the east side of Front between Madison and Jefferson streets. The works were established in 1860 by Messrs Carson & Brother, and has maintained a reputation which has gradually succeeded in placing the establishment among the fixtures of the city and the oldest in the State. The firm not only manufacture largely for the trade, which in past years has been rather extensive, but as contractors and builders use a considerable amount of their own manufactures. Their best purchaser is the upper Willamette and southern counties of Oregon, which is an evidence of growth in that quarter. The machinery used at these works, driven by steam, is of the latest improved patterns, and includes one of H. B. Smith's excellent moulding machines, built at Lowell, Mass., capable of dressing the four sides of a piece at one time. A hand machine by F. R. Crosby, inventor, used for driving staples in the center rod and slats of a blind, and which operates with great precision, performing accurately the work of five men, is one of the machines which excited our admiration at this establishment, and convinced us that something worthy may at all times be seen, in taking a view of the workshops. After passing through Messrs Carson & Porter's works we came upon the wood turning and stair building establishment of Mr W. F. Wilcox, but will be obliged to reserve our observations for future remarks.

RE[illegible]'S COURT—HOFFMAN, J. February 8th 1866—Matilda Hopper, arrested on complaint of Jacob Levy, [illegible] by retaining $19 50 in money, belonging to the private prosecutor, who had purchased 50 cents worth of lager at a cellar saloon, corner of Morrison and Front streets, known as the "Mammoth"—kept by [illegible]—where Matilda was a waiter girl. The evidence went to show that Levy had given the woman a twenty dollar gold piece, in payment of the drinks, and that she [illegible] the balance of the money $19 50, instead of paying it to the rightful owner. The case, as it was developed, showed clearly the plan of operations at such dens as the saloon where these circumstances transpired, and proved them to be a great nuisance. The [illegible] it was proven, had been [illegible] the fair Matilda, who is a healthy, robust [illegible] of the gentle sex, and had [illegible] for her room, a stove and a clock, also had paid for oysters that she had eaten at a [illegible] in the city. In fact was her [illegible] but on this occasion she had [illegible] him, and [illegible] to show any authority for squandering his money, after he had repeatedly asked for it, and [illegible] to drink of the wine she was purchasing with it, the Court was compelled to enter the plea of larceny against her, and she was required to appear this morning for sentence. [illegible] Beckert, a small boy, was brought into Court for misconduct. In consequence of his years he was let off with a reprimand, and a promise to be locked up in case he again appeared for sentence before the Court.

THE LOYAL [illegible].—This fine little steamer in the [illegible] Packet Line, after experiencing the [illegible] of fortune attendant upon voyages of exploration, in attempting to stem the current of the Cowlitz river, while [illegible] her way along its primitive banks recently, and lying upon a sand spit for some time, again reached this city on Wednesday evening, and was here met by the [illegible] who had an attachment for her, not based exactly upon any [illegible] regard for her valuable services in [illegible] the depth of the forests of Washington Territory by ascending the Cowlitz, and deciding just how far inland the steamboat whistle might with safety be [illegible] over them, but it was a sort of adjunct instrument in writing, an [illegible], or [illegible] the Sheriff to attach the steamer, her boats, tackle, &c., in order to satisfy the innate desire of some creditors. We regret this last act, but hope to see the Loyal [illegible] yet of much service to her owners. They perhaps feel some as the man did in [illegible], when he had been overtaken with reverses of fortune, his farm inundated, stock, barns, house, [illegible] and everything on the place [illegible] away [illegible] being that a mortgage which existed at the time was the only thing that was not swept from the premises. It is decidedly better for the [illegible]. She can much more easily retain her good [illegible] with [illegible] from the people than if they were libels.

EXHIBITION.—This evening, as will be seen by advertisement in another column, Prof L. Cary, who is very well and favorably known in this State, [illegible] will give one of his popular exhibitions in this city, [illegible] He has a new and very [illegible] well calculated to finely exhibit the [illegible] which he [illegible] with him, of the starry [illegible] and which is [illegible] As Professor Cary is so well known, and his [illegible] both instructive and [illegible] it is a [illegible] for us to say that the house will be full. [illegible] 50 cents.

THE BALL LAST EVENING.—The [illegible] ball of the First [illegible] Benevolent Society of this city, given last evening at the Hall of the Turners, was well attended by the beauty and [illegible] of the city, and was every way a decidedly successful affair. The [illegible] of this [illegible] are [illegible] of much praise for their [illegible], and the party last evening goes far to allow that they are [illegible]. We regret that time forbids our giving a more extended notice of the [illegible] ball, but we trust we shall have occasion many times in future to record such [illegible] to similar [illegible] the getting up of [illegible] which [illegible] of the fixed institutions of our growing city, and is certainly worthy of imitation.

MEETING OF THE BOARD OF DELEGATES.—The newly elected Board of Delegates to the Fire Department met last night at the Common Council Chamber. The temporary organization was [illegible] by calling A. B. Hallock to the chair, and appointing Benj. L. Norden, Secretary. The Board was organized permanently by choosing the following officers: A. B. Hallock, President; Benj. L. Norden, [illegible]; [illegible] Seymour, [illegible] Committees were appointed, and applications for exempt certificates were [illegible], when the Board adjourned.

CITY TAXES.—But one day more remains for people to pay their city taxes and save costs. The [illegible] having given [illegible] to the tax payers that he intends to return the list as [illegible] those taxes are paid promptly, can not be [illegible] if he does so. His office is at No. [illegible] Washington street, where he may be found from 9 A. M. until 4 P. M. Those who wait till the last hour may be obliged to pay costs for their delinquency.

[illegible].—The latest news from the mines of [illegible] is far more encouraging than any we have ever hitherto heard. The mill now crushing ore in that district promises to be more [illegible] remunerative to the projectors of the enterprise than they had anticipated in their most sanguine hopes. We are [illegible] particulars from that locality in a short time which will be conclusive proof of the wealth of the district.

THE WRONG PERSON.—An innocent man was arrested and brought to this city, arriving here [illegible] day, supposed to have been Geo. W. Wright, the escaped horse thief. He was released when it was ascertained that he was not the person Sheriff Stitzel wanted to see. Such mistakes are often liable to occur, and certainly offer no reason to censure the officers.

THE FERRY.—Yesterday among other business matters before the Court of County Commissioners, was that of the petition of Mrs Brush for a [illegible] to run a ferry boat on the Willamette river at this city. The subject was not determined when the Court adjourned last evening, and will be resumed this morning.

OFFICERS ELECT.—At a regular meeting of the Directors of the Portland Library Association, the following officers were chosen for the [illegible] two years: Pr[illegible] L. H. Wakefield; Vice President, Wm. Strong; Corresponding Secretary, Henry Failing; Recording Secretary, Theodore Minor; Treasurer, B. G[illegible]ith.

MECHANICS' INSTITUTE.—We have heard but little for a few weeks about the Mechanics' Institute, but are glad to see preparations making for permanent rooms at 106 Front street, in the Postoffice building. An extra room is being finished up in that locality for the use of the Institute.

LECTURES AT THE DALLES.—A series of literary and scientific lectures are being delivered at the Dalles, the pr[illegible] of which are to be divided between the Congregational and Methodist Sabbath-schools. Among the lecturers announced we notice Rev. Dr. Benson, Rev. Dr. Atkinson and Rev. Mr. Caffrey of Portland.

THE CALIFORNIA STEAMER.—Wells, Fargo & Co. have advices that the steamship Pacific left San Francisco for Portland at 10 o'clock A. M. on Tuesday last. She will be able to reach her dock in this city by to-night, without doubt.

FRED PATTERSON.—We are informed that this [illegible] was engaged in another shooting affray but recently at Walla Walla, in which he lost his right arm. It is a pity that it was not his head.

CLEARED.—The schooner J. C. Champion, we are pleased to state, with a full cargo of merchandise, groceries and farming tools, left yesterday for Tillamook Bay.

A VETERAN JOURNAL.—The New York Herald of December 16, 1865, republishes from its own columns, an account of the great fire in New York city in the year 1835, just thirty years before. The Herald is for once justified in an occasion for self adulation. Its account of the great fire as printed thirty years ago, would be creditable to most of the big dailies of this day.

(COMMUNICATED.)

Regulations for Lent.

The following are the regulations for Lent for the present year, commencing the 14th instant:

1. All the week days of Lent, from Ash Wednesday till Easter Sunday, are fast days of precept, on one meal, with the allowance of a [illegible] in the evening, [illegible] in the morning.
2. The precept of [illegible] forbids the use of flesh meat. But by dispensation the use of flesh meat is allowed in this diocese [illegible] principal meal on all [illegible] of Lent [illegible] except [illegible] all the Fridays. By this [illegible] there remain only three days [illegible] week [illegible] Ash Wednesday [illegible] Holy Week of which [illegible]
3. [illegible]
4. [illegible] flesh meat and fish at the same meal is prohibited.
5. There is no prohibition to use eggs, butter, milk, [illegible] used in preparing fish and vegetables, &c., in all Lent. This dispensation extends also to the days of abstinence throughout the year.
6. The Church excuses from the obligation of fasting (but not of abstinence from flesh meat, except in case of sickness or the like) the following classes of persons, viz: the infirm, those whose duties are of an exhausting or laborious character, those under twenty-one years of age or only attaining their growth, women in pregnancy or nursing infants, and those who are enfeebled by old age.
7. It is eminently in the spirit of the Church that such persons should supply in part by good works for what is remitted in fasting and abstinence.
8. Fervent prayer and almsdeeds according to each one's ability ought to be inseparable companions of our fasting. These three sisters should go hand in hand to help us in our warfare against our three mortal enemies, the flesh, the world and the devil. According to the advice of the Angel to Tobias, xii 8: "Prayer is good with fasting and alms, more than to lay up treasures of gold." The practice of these three eminent good works we must oppose to that triple concupiscence which reigns in the world (1 St. John 1, 16) and by means of which Satan now exercises his unhappy reign. By fasting we overcome the lust of the flesh; by almsdeeds we subdue the lust of the eyes by which we are apt to covet the mammon of the world and its empty toys; and by fervent and humble prayer we conquer the pride of life and put to flight the devil, the king of pride. Let us call on in this holy season these powerful auxiliaries to help us in our warfare. There is a very praiseworthy practice kept in many Christian houses in saying the Rosary and evening prayers in families every day in Lent. This holy exercise we would recommend to be practiced by all during Lent.
9. But all ought to remember that the very soul of the fasting is the inward spirit, which is a penitential spirit. This penitential spirit implies a deep sense of our sins, a horror and detestation of all our past disloyalties and treasons, and a hearty sorrow for them; a sincere desire to return to God and renounce our sinful ways for the future; and, particularly, a readiness of mind to make the best satisfaction we are able to the Divine justice by punishing ourselves for our sins. Fasting in this spirit cannot fail of moving God to mercy.
10. The usual evening exercises of Lent in the churches, consisting of the Rosary of the Blessed Virgin Mary, an instruction, and the Benediction of the Holy Sacrament, are recommended on every Wednesday and Friday during the Lent.

Given at Portland, Oregon, February 8, 1866.
† F. N. BLANCHET, Archbishop of O. C.

P. S.—The dispensation of abstinence, viz:
1. On all the Saturdays of the year which are not fasting days of obligation;
2. On the Wednesdays of Advent;
3. On the three Rogation days;
4. On certain days in Lent;

Has been renewed at Rome for ten years from June 12th, 1865, for the whole Ecclesiastical Province of Oregon City.
† F. N. BLANCHET, Archbishop of O. C.

A CHIVALRIC SPEECH.—The correspondent of the Boston Advertiser, writing from Eastern Georgia, recently, reports as a curious specimen of what one hears, the following speech made by an apparently intelligent man to a group of half a dozen persons, of whom the writer was one:

"I've sent an advertisement to the paper for a job of overseeing some plantations next year. I reckon I could do that right lively. Oh, I tell you, I can do up some tall cussin when I git started. Can't lick free niggers, but I don't know if there's any law agin cussin 'em, and I believe it does 'em a heap o' good. It's next best to lickin'. Just cuss one o' 'em right smart for 'bout five minutes, and he'll play off part. Probably the Yankees don't like that's ylo but I ha'nt no use for a Yankee nohow. I had a lot of likely negroes but they're all gone, had Confederate money, but that's all gone, and I've got a heap o' Confederate bonds, but they aint worth a damn. I reckon God Almighty fought on the other side in this war. He used to smile on us, but he hasn't given us anything but frowns lately. I don't care a damn, but I don't like to see my friends all so cut up about it. I can git along well [illegible]ugh. I should like to lick a hundred free negroes just once all 'round. If I did'nt bring 'em to know their places, I'd pay ten dollars apiece for all I failed on. But the Yankees give us our orders—we musn't lick the freedmen, they say. Free-dam cusses I call 'em. I reckon 'taint agin no law to swar at 'em, and damn me if I can't do that ar. Yes, sir—God Almighty was agin us, but I 'low 'twont be wrong to cuss the free niggers. Yes, sir—God Almighty was agin us. Wal, I ha'nt no use for a Yankee—they're low down, triflin' fellows, anyhow, and I reckon I shall have to play a lone hand and git along the best I can by myself."

HELENA.—For the Benefit of our readers abroad and those of our home readers who may not be posted in regard to the geographical location of our city, we will attempt the desired information. Helena is situated a few miles south of the forty seventh parallel, and on the one hundred and twelfth degree of longitude west from Greenwich. It is at the base of the mountains which surround the Prickley Pear valley, about fifteen miles from the Missouri river and about the same distance from the dividing ridge of the Rocky Mountains. It is [illegible] the country of the Blackfoot Indians, being on land claimed by a branch of that tribe called Pag[illegible]. It is the county seat of Edgerton county; is nearer the geographical center of the Territory than any other town, nearer the center of the mines of the Territory,—Ophir and adjacent gulches being on the northwest, Confederate on the northeast, and Alder Gulch on the South. It is the natural [illegible] for trade from Oregon and the Missouri River, which are the only points whence we draw supplies except Salt Lake City. A few buildings were erected on the present site of Helena, sometime last fall, but the commencement and naming of our city may date from February last. Since that time, building has been going on rapidly, until now it is estimated that we have a population of one thousand souls. We shall take occasion to speak more at length of the trade, business prospects and resources of this city, at an early day.—Radiator.

REWARD FOR SERVICES.—How will the Emperor of France reward that fine French Gentleman of the old school, M. de Lamartine, for the awful document he has just published in support of the Imperialists pretensions in Mexico? Louis Napoleon is not in the habit of letting services of this kind and value go without recognition. Will he make Alphonse a Duc, or give him a seat in the Senate, or a sinecure under the government? Unquestionably, judging from his past history, the most acceptable gift which the Emperor could give to the poet would be a good round pile of that "yellow dross" which it has been supposed poets despised, but which Lamartine is known to appreciate profoundly. If the Emperor of France fail to do his duty in this matter, we suggest that his youthful protege, the Emperor of Mexico, present the poet with one of the fattest gold mines in his dominions, and we also suggest that he present it as soon as possible, for fear that by and by he may have no Mexican gold mines to give away to those who support him. We are sorry to see an acrid spirit exhibited in some quarters toward Lamartine since the publication of his pro Mexican anti American pronunciamento. But we see no call for this, and when we recall his former career as President of the French Republic and as litterateur, we are rather inclined to regard him with economical magnanimity.—N. Y. Times.

THE RICHMOND HOAX.—One of the best practical jokes in Theodore Hook's clever "Gilbert Gurney," is Daly's hoax upon the lady who had never been at Richmond before, or, at least, knew none of the peculiarities of the place. Daly desired the waiter, after dinner, to bring some "maids of honor"—those cheese cakes for which the place has, time out of mind, been celebrated. The lady stared, then laughed, and asked, "What do you mean by maids of honor?" "Dear me!" said Daly, "Don't you know that this is so courtly a place, and so completely under the influence of State etiquette that everything in Richmond is called after the functionaries of the palace? What are called cheese cakes elsewhere are here called maids of honor; a capon is called a Lord Chamberlain; a goose is a Lord Steward; a roast pig is a Master of the Horse; a pair of ducks, Grooms of the Bedchamber; a gooseberry tart a Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod; and so on." The unsophisticated lady was taken in, when she actually saw the Maids of Honor make their appearance in the shape of cheese cakes; she convulsed the whole party by turning to the waiter and desiring him, in a sweet but decided tone, to bring her a "Gentleman of the Black Rod," if they had one in the house quite cold!

A FINANCIAL BULL.—The Chicago Tribune says: A Western farmer who wished to invest the accumulations of his industry in United States securities, went to Jay Cooke's to procure treasury notes. The clerk inquired what denomination he would have them in? Having never heard that term used except to distinguish religious sects, he, after a little deliberation, replied: "Well, you may give me part in Old School Presbyterian to please the old lady, but give me the best on 't in Freewill Baptist."

COLD.—The Helena Radiator of December 16th, says the thermometer had been down to [illegible] below zero, and would have gone lower had the machine been longer at the zero end.

The Vedette says that Brigham Young has essayed a grand monopoly of the following nature and proportions:

"In each Bishop's diocese throughout the Territory the order is to raise so much—in money or stock—to help start an outfit of five hundred wagons to go to the States next spring, ostensibly to freight their own goods and save so much in freight, etc. for the benefit of the masses. But those people first agree to wait five years before they shall draw out of these Co-op. Sutler stocks after they do arrive the amount now being contributed. That is Brigham sends the scheme for freight to the East which are being pressed by the poor farmers, while the priestly hierarchy will have the benefits of the same for five years to come—all because the poor deluded victims dare not assert their independence of monopoly." The Vedette says this is to transparent a dodge for even the credulity of the most faithful, and the scales are fast falling from their eyes, and the pressure of Brigham's manacles is formidably being loosened by its victims in the south and north.

RELIGIOUS BELIEF.—Sir Humphrey Davy said: "I envy no quality of the mind or intellect of others, be it genius, power, wit, or fancy; but if I could choose what would be most delightful, and I believe most useful to me, I should prefer a firm religious belief to any other blessing; for it makes life a discipline of goodness, creates new hopes when all earthly hopes vanish, and throws over the decay, the destruction of existence, the most gorgeous of all lights; awakens life even in death, and from destruction and decay calls up beauty and divinity; makes an instrument of torture and shame a ladder of ascent to paradise; and, far above all combinations of earthly hopes, calls up the most delightful visions of palms and amaranths, the gardens of the blest, the security of everlasting joys, where the sensualist and the skeptic view only gloom, decay, annihilation and despair."

A True Bill

Early on the morning of the 15th of April information reached the French police that the Baroness de C was lying dead in her bed, strangled with a piece of ribbon She had been married as a widow to Baron de C., and was about twenty eight years of age, very pretty, of engaging manners, and both she and her husband were known far and wide for lavish hospitality.

Three weeks before the murder the Baron set out for Russia where it was said he had inherited some property from a relative During the absence of her husband the Baroness kept very much at home with Ernestine Lamont, a beautiful girl of the most earnest and simple manners who had been educated and protected by her On the night before the murder, the Baroness went to the opera; Ernestine, who was not very well, did not accompany her, neither did she sit up for her as the Baroness had a private key and did not wish the young lady to be disturbed It was the custom that when the Baroness, on awaking in the morning, rang her bell, Ernestine went first to her bed room When, on the morning after the murder, no bell was heard to ring, the servants wondered and at last one of them went up to Ernestine's room to ask the cause. It was empty Thinking that she had gone, as usual, to the Baroness' bed room, the servant went thither. There the shutters were still closed, and the night lamp burned on a little table by the bedside. On the floor lay the lifeless body of Ernestine The girl now screamed for help The other servants hurried up stairs, and upon the opening of the shutters it was seen that the Baroness lay dead evidently strangled with a piece of ribbon which was at once recognized as belonging to Ernestine, who was lying in a swoon on the floor

On coming to herself, it was naturally supposed that she would be able to throw some light on the matter, but to the surprise of all, she showed a nervous hesitation hardly to be reconciled with innocence. On further examination, it was found that the secretary stood wide open and that a quantity of papers and other articles were laying about in confusion, as if the contents of each drawer had been hastily turned inside out By this time the police had arrived With scarcely a moment's hesitation, they pronounced that one of the inmates of the house must have either committed the crime, or at least been an accomplice in it Evidently, also, there had been a robbery added to murder, and, therefore, it was thought right to search the boxes of each member of the household. The servants were all willing, but when it came to Ernestine's turn to deliver up her keys, the young lady showed a strange unwillingness to do so. Of course, the police persisted, and in a very little time discovered a large sum of money and several jewels belonging to the murdered lady carefully secreted at the bottom of the box

"How does Mademoiselle account for this money?" was the first question put to her

"I do not know—I cannot tell—pray, do not ask me," was the hesitating reply.

The suspicions already attached to her were now considerably strengthened, and the police only discharged their duty in arresting her

The case was tried, and Ernestine Lamont found guilty.

A young lawyer named Bernard, whose knowledge of Ernestine's previous character made it very hard for him to believe her guilty, resolved to see her. After some little difficulty, permission was granted him to visit the condemned in prison. But if he went thither with any faith in her innocence, he left the prison without doubt of her guilt. Her answers to his questions were evasive and unsatisfactory.

On reaching home late that evening, he found a note lying on his table. It was from Ernestine, and ran as follows:

"My dear friend: I feel that I owe you at least some explanation of my strange conduct, and will therefore put you in possession of the facts in the case. It is only forestalling my intention. This letter would have been handed to you after my death * * * You are aware, too, of her husband's fatal propensity to the gambling table, a passion which in the course of time led to an estrangement between them. The Baroness was very beautiful, and still young, and failing to find that love and affection which she had hoped her husband would show her, formed an unfortunate intrigue. I was horror-struck when she informed me of this; but it was not for me to blame her. As might be expected, no good could [illegible] result from this [illegible]. Her lover proved unworthy of her confidence, and succeeded, whether by threats or by menaces, I know not, in obtaining from her large sums of money. It was but a few days before her death that she confided this to me, and at the same time begged me to take care of her jewels and money in my box, as she dreaded lest her sordid lover should obtain possession of them. The last time I saw her alive was on the night she went to the opera. At what hour she returned I know not, for she always had a private key with her. Hence, dear friend, you will understand my reluctance to have my boxes searched, and my evasive answers as to the money and jewels found in them. Had I told the truth should I have been believed? No! And how could I say anything to dishonor the name of one who has been more than a mother to me? Besides, I did not even know the name of her secret lover, and I had never seen him. No; it is better as it is. I am ready to die. My secret to all save yourself shall die with me. That you believe in my innocence is the only comfort I have left me. Your unhappy friend, ERNESTINE"

"Thank God!" murmured the young man, pressing the paper to his lips. "Henceforth I will devote my life to prove your innocence to the world. God grant that it be not yet too late."

[illegible], late as it was, Bernard at once repaired to the prefect's house, and after some difficulty procured admission. The prefect, fortunately, was an old friend of Bernard's father, and it was because of this fact that the young man was admitted at so late an hour.

"But, my good friend," said the old man, after patiently listening to all he had to say, "believe me, it is a useless task. There is no doubt that the young woman is guilty, either as principal or an accomplice. Still, as you so earnestly wish it, you shall be permitted to search the apartments of the murdered lady. And now, good night," he [illegible] "and let me hear the result of your investigation."

Early the [illegible] morning Bernard, accompanied by a gendarme, went to the Baron's house Everything had been left on the fatal morning [illegible] was still in the [illegible]. Not a [illegible] nor a [illegible] was no violence [illegible] possible ad[illegible] outside. Nothing, however, [illegible] itself [illegible] gave the slightest clue to the mystery.

The [illegible] had now searched for hours, and Bernard felt that it was useless to stay there any longer. With a sad and heavy heart, therefore, he proceeded to leave the apartment. But in passing out into the entry which was quite dark, his foot struck against something, which, on taking it up, he found a hat. Thinking it belonged to the Baron, he was about to hang it up with the others on the peg from which he supposed it to have fallen.

"That hat, monsieur, if you please; I do not remember to have seen it before. It is strange," remarked the gendarme, as he compared the hat in question with the others that hung up in the entry, "It is larger, and of a different shape to them!"

"Let me have it, my good friend; I will show it to the prisoner. If it should chance to belong to this secret lover of the murdered lady," thought Bernard to himself, as he hurriedly drove to the prison.

Ernestine was anxiously expecting to see her friend, for he had promised to visit her that day again, and she wished to learn from his own lips whether he still believed in her innocence

"Do you know this hat, Ernestine?" said Bernard, on entering the cell

"That hat—good heavens!—it is the very hat which the Baron had on the night he left Paris," said Ernestine, in an excited manner

"Impossible—we compared it with the other hats—and this is much larger. I believe it belonged to the Baroness'—"

"No—no—a thousand times, no—it is the Baron's—he bought it the very day he left. It was too large for him, and he asked me to put some wadding under the lining for him—see if it be not there."

"But, Ernestine, it must be fancy on your part—that hat never belonged to the Baron But—stay—you are right," added Bernard, as, on turning up the lining the wadding fell out and with it a piece of paper which had been used to add a little to its thickness It was a bill written by the landlord of the hotel at Strasburg made out in the Baron's name for a weeks board and lodging It was dated April 7—just fourteen days after his departure from Paris

Ernestine and Bernard looked at each other for a few moments in silence, as strange thoughts passed through the minds of each

That it was the Baron's hat was now proved!—but how did it come there? Had he returned to Paris secretly before the murder? Was he the murderer?

Ernestine turned deadly pale

"Do you suppose that the Baron ——" she gasped

"Is the murderer?" added Bernard finishing the sentence "Yes! I do But I will go at once to the prefect"

For the first time since her condemnation a faint ray of hope was kindled in Ernestine's heart The sight of Bernard her old friend in happier days, had indeed excited a wish to live in her young breast

"How thankful I am I did not say anything at the trial The good God will protect me!"

Bernard now left the prison and hastened to the home of the prefect

"Well and what did you find?" asked the old man smiling sadly at his young friend who rushed into the room without waiting to be announced

"Be good enough to examine this hat," said Bernard, as he handed it to him and recounted to him the manner in which he had found it, and what Ernestine had subsequently told him

"Her husband!—he the murderer! Yes, it is plain—and we have been accusing an innocent girl!" ejaculated the prefect carefully examining the hat "But leave me now I must think it over But let me urge secrecy on you and depend on me"

Early the next morning Bernard was again sent for to the prefect's house

"I have carefully gone over the whole evidence since I saw you," he said "and it certainly seems there is a strong suspicion against the Baron I have caused inquiries to be made, and have ascertained that the Baron was a confirmed gambler and that his journey to St Petersburg was probably only a ruse to avoid arrest It is a terrible case and we must proceed very cautiously The Baron stands very high in the public esteem and it seems incredible that he could have committed this horrible crime Still that hat and the bill of the landlord made out to his own name prove at least that he must have returned to Paris Why should he return? What was the motive? However I have dispatched an agent of the secret police to Strasburg, to track his steps from that place When I hear anything I will send for you"

On arriving at Strasburg the police agent at once repaired to the Mansion Rouge. The landlord perfectly remembered the Baron's having stayed at his hotel for a week, and having then gone, whither he could not say The porter, however remembered where his luggage was taken It was to a house outside the city on the road to Saverne, where a hired carriage was in readiness. He got into the carriage and drove off But as the driver was an acquaintance of the porter's it was no difficult matter to find him.

* * * * * *

Acting in obedience to the orders of his chief, the agent referred the Barron to a comtoir, where he would be furnished with the register of the death and burial of his wife

On entering the room the Baron was politely invited to take a seat while the necessary papers were being found

After the lapse of a quarter of an hour an officer entered the room, and requested the Baron to accompany him to another comtoir, where, to his dismay, he found himself submitted to a rigorous examination

"But, Monsieur le Baron, when you left home on March 25th, whither did you travel?" asked the chief officer

"I traveled through Germany, en route for St Petersburg"

"Good! But which was the first town at which you stayed?"

"Strasburg"

"Quite true!" said his questioner referring to some papers "On what day did you arrive there?"

"On the 28th"

"Yes! and how long did you remain?"

"Let me see—yes! it was one night and half the next day," replied the Baron, with a little hesitation in his manner

"And where did you proceed to next?" replied the officer

After some reflection, the Baron answered that he had gone to Frankfort

"Indeed!" answered the officer, raising his eyes, and directing a steady glance toward the Baron. "To Frankfort! I think you are mistaken. You say you arrived at Strasburg on the 28th, where you remained till the following day But the landlord of the Mansion Rouge says you remained at his house until April 7th. How do you account for that Monsieur le Baron?"

"Was I there a week? Yes! Now I think of it, you are quite right, Monsieur; for I met several friends there, who persuaded me to lengthen my stay."

"You also state that you next went to Frankfort. But if Monsieur le Baron reflects, he will remember that he went to Saverne in a close carriage."

"Yes; but that was only a day's trip, that had nothing to do with my journey," was the ready answer. "But may I be permitted to ask, Monsieur, why all these questions?"

"Excuse me, Monsieur le Baron, you are here to answer questions, not to ask them Suffice it to say, that it is usual under such circumstances. Now please to attend You said just now it was only a day's trip, I think; how was it you came to stay four days at Saverne?"

"I had intended to remain only one day at Saverne, but was taken ill during my stay at the hotel"

"Was that why Monsieur le Baron changed his name?" continued the officer

"Changed my name? Monsieur must be in error"

"Not at all. You took the name of Thionville, for some reason best known to yourself But as you have forgotten this circumstance, will you have the goodness to tell us where you went to on leaving Saverne?"

"I returned to Strasburg."

"Pardon me, Monsieur le Baron, and allow me to refresh your memory. You went, or pretended to go, to a private house in the neighborhood But was not Paris the goal of your journey, and did you not arrive here about April 15th?"

"Monsieur!" exclaimed the Baron, "I have submitted to these impertinent questions quite long enough. By what right you presume to interrogate me in the manner you have done, I do not know. Rest assured I shall represent the matter to the Minister of Police I wish you a good morning" And the Baron turned himself round to leave the room.

"Not so fast, Monsieur, I have not done with you," continued the officer, without noticing the interruption "I repeat—you arrived in Paris about the 15th, and you were in your wife's bed room on the night of the 15th and 16th"

At these words the Baron leaped to his feet, his face distorted with fear and passion

"Calm yourself, Monsieur le Baron, I have not finished with you yet. Will you then explain, if you were not in the bedroom of your wife on the night in question, which you will remember was the very night on which she was murdered—how it was that your hat was found in the passage?" And with these words he handed a hat to the Baron

All eyes were bent upon him The Baron turned deathly pale, and remained speechless a considerable time At last he stammered incoherently

"It is not my hat. I never saw this one before I had one like it; but not this

"Not this?" exclaimed the relentless questioner "Monsieur le Baron, you have been followed step by step from the day you quitted Paris to the day you returned If this hat be not yours, then have the goodness to tell me how your bill incurred at the Mansion Rouge, Strasburg, found its way underneath the lining? Please look for yourself."

"Hotel bill!" gasped the Baron, as he struck his forehead with his clenched hand

"Yes, wretched man By that little piece of paper, Providence has disclosed your crime and has prevented an innocent girl from dying a felon's death Confess that you entered your wife's room and committed the diabolical deed for which you would have allowed another to suffer"

But such a confession was never made

That night Baron de C was safely shut up in prison till his trial should take place All Paris rang with the news that the real murderer of the Baroness had been discovered, and that he was no other than her own husband But that night the prisoner escaped On entering the cell on the following morning he was found lying stretched out on his couch cold and stiff It was supposed that, leading a lawless life, he had been in the habit of carrying poison about him

Years have elapsed since the above events took place Monsieur Bernard soon became one of the most celebrated ornaments of the French bar and his wife, nee Ernestine Lamont noted not only for the brilliancy of her balls and dinners but for the affability of her manner and courteousness of her disposition Of the story of the murder, nobody knows more than is here told

Mrs Elizabeth C Gaskell the popular English writer, whose death occurred last month was the wife of a Unitarian Clergyman, and for several years resided in Manchester although at the time of her death her home was in Alton Her first novel 'Mary Barton,' was published in 1848 and is said to have been written by the advice of a friend to divert her mind from the oppression of domestic affliction Perhaps her 'Life of Charlotte Bronte' has been the most popular of all her works, and though not free from inaccuracies its fascinating style and the public interest in the author of 'Jane Eyre,' caused it to be as eagerly sought for as the most entertaining novel Mrs Gaskell's last work 'Wives and Daughters' is now in press and will soon be published by Messrs Harper & Brothers

An engineer at Nashville Tennessee, sent a workman under his locomotive to oil the running gear, and then forgetting his presence, ran his engine ahead just far enough to cut off one of the man's legs A bystander shouted to warn the engineer, who thereupon backed his machine in dismay and cut off the other leg of the unfortunate workman. He survived, however and suing the company for $50 000 damages, has obtained $5 500

THE STANDARD
AMERICAN BILLIARD TABLES!

AND COMBINATION CUSHIONS

MESSRS. PHELAN & COLLENDER

WOULD RESPECTFULLY CALL THE ATTENTION of persons wanting Billiard Tables to the great superiority of the above tables, manufactured exclusively at their establishment

At the Billiard Congress of 1863, composed of all the first-class players of America, it was unanimously resolved that tables of our manufacture should be used at all matches for the Championship, as the best and only reliable tables

These Billiard Tables have received the unqualified approval of the best players and most competent judges, who have universally pronounced them unequaled for general excellence and durability

Seven distinct patents for improvements in Billiard Tables have been granted to us by the United States Patent Office, and we have lately [illegible] a Patent from the French Government for our improvement in Billiard Cushions

We employ, in the construction of our tables, a variety of machines specially made for the purpose, by means of which we are enabled to insure a scientific and mechanical accuracy hitherto unknown in Billiard manufacture

Having a long experience and thorough knowledge of all the appliances of Billiards, and constantly on hand a large stock of the best and most thoroughly seasoned materials, we are prepared to furnish everything required in the Billiard line with unprecedented dispatch

The eminent French Billiard Player, M Berger has published the following opinion

"On the eve of leaving the United States, I am happy to declare to all amateurs of Billiards that, after a tour of eleven months through the principal cities, I have been enabled to judge in a satisfactory manner of the superiority of the Billiard Tables manufactured by Phelan & Collender The system of manufacturing is so superior that I am happy to introduce their style of tables into France. They have united to their manufacture of American Billiard Tables that of the French Tables, of remarkable excellence and beauty For these reasons, I am happy to make this declaration

"BERGER, CLAUDIUS,
Prof. of Billiards, Paris."

Parties ordering from us will find our prices as low as good work can possibly be made for We sell first class articles at a fair price, and will not make an inferior article at any price

Orders by mail carefully and promptly executed. Illustrated Catalogue and Price Lists sent by mail The Billiard Cue, a journal published in the interest of Billiards and containing details of all novelties, a copious record of Billiard news, and everything of interest to amateurs of Billiards, sent free on application
